

FREELENS

»A day in the life of a refugee in ...«
is the working title of a photographic project instigated by FREELENS.

With over 2,400 members, FREELENS is the largest professional association for professional photographers. Right across Germany, over the coming days and weeks, these photographers will be addressing the theme of »Refugees«. The campaign will culminate in a series of exhibitions, a dedicated web page, and publications in various other media. If any profits are made from the project, FREELENS will donate these profits to aid projects for refugees in Germany.

However before we can publish any of your photographs, we need your consent.

By signing this form, you are giving us your consent to publish the photographs taken of you.

The photographs will be published on the Internet, in photographic exhibitions, in magazines (digital and analogue formats) and in other printed publications. By signing, you are also giving your consent for the photographs to be used in the promotion or advertising of the aforementioned publications.
